Washington Needs Feedback: Services for Children & Families

Governor J. Inslee recently appointed the Washington Blue Ribbon Commission on the Delivery of Services to Children and Families to recommend the organizational structure for a department focused exclusively on children and families. The goals of the new department are to achieve better outcomes for more children throughout the state and to improve child and family well-being through earlier and more comprehensive intervention strategies.

The Commission is seeking input from consumers, providers and staff in child and family serving agencies, and dependency court personnel.
